Subject: Help Reunite Families – Donate Today

Dear (potential donor name),

Here at the Center for Legal Immigration Assistance, we believe that everyone deserves the opportunity to enjoy the good life in Nebraska.

We provide educational, mental and legal services to immigrants and families navigating complex situations that determine their abilities to work and live safely in our communities.

Your donation can directly support immigrant families, offering opportunities for education, healthcare, legal assistance, social integration and most importantly, the right to remain together.

As policies make life harder for immigrants, it's important now more than ever to stand together to keep families together.

Neighbors, Not Strangers: storytelling matters in Immigration Advocacy

For organizations like the Center for Legal Immigration Assistance (CLIA), storytelling is more than communication. It's advocacy.

Every immigration case tells a deeply important story. Behind every petition, application and hearing is a mother trying to reunite with her child, a survivor seeking safety or a family hoping to find peace and stability.

CLIA has had the privilege of being a part of many of these life-changing journeys. Below are just a few of the stories that show the impact of immigration support and the resilience of the people we serve.

A Story of Reunion

In August of 2021, Hakim Gul Abasin was forced to leave Afghanistan, leaving not only his country behind but also his wife and children.

Abasin was a former U.S. Government employee and became a special Visa recipient, which helped him rebuild his life. Yet, he still carried the pain of not being able to see his family, or even meet his newborn child, back in Afghanistan.

With the help of CLIA, Abasin was able to navigate the complex immigration process. Nearly four years later, in April of 2025, Abasin was finally able to reunite with his loved ones and meet his not-so-newborn son for the first time, truly a special moment for everyone involved.

A Story of Strength

For privacy reasons, we do not use TorSha's full name. However, that does not disregard the extraordinary resilience and strength she has displayed throughout her life.

When TorSha left Afghanistan and arrived in the United States with refugee status and all four of her children, she had no idea where to start. She had to leave behind her infant son at a refugee camp because she did not have the resources or support needed to complete the right paperwork.

After turning to CLIA for support in 2022, she was finally able to receive her green card and even reunite with her baby in less than a year.

TorSha's life is one of extreme hardship and determination. She survived war, oppression and exile but made it out on the other side with all of her loving children. For further details on her strength and perseverance, read her memoir A Girl From Afghanistan: Miracle Life Mysterious Me.

A Story of Survival

Content warning: The following section has references to sex trafficking, torture and abuse.

Another powerful story is that of Shireen Jardo Alhanto, A Yazidi woman and survivor of ISIS captivity whose story was shared publicly by KETV.

Alhanto's story starts in northern Iraq, where she helped care for her younger siblings. However, her life changed in an instant when ISIS attacked her village, capturing 47 of her family members, many of whom are still missing to this day.

After being trafficked and abused, Alhanto was able to rebuild her life in a faraway place, here, in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Blog Post | April 2026

Lincoln is home to the largest Yazidi community in America, so with the help of CLIA, Alhanto found a space that was not only safe but also felt a little like home.

On top of all the abuse she endured, Alhanto's journey to safety in Lincoln was not easy. In 2017, CLIA helped her file for asylum, but with canceled interviews and COVID-related delays, her application wasn't approved until June of 2024.

Luckily, Shireen Jardo Alhonto's story is that of resilience, patience and survival. But this is not the case for all immigrants.

Why We Share These Stories

At CLIA, we believe that stories help build understanding. They remind us that immigrants are truly our neighbors who need as much support as they can get. They belong in our community because they are already important parts of it.

When you support and donate to CLIA, you're also supporting your neighbors on their journey and giving them space to thrive in ways they couldn't before.

Together, we can keep families together, protect survivors and make sure more stories end in safety, dignity and hope. After all, empathy is a gift.

If you want to take action with your empathy and, in turn, protect your neighbors, donate here.
